Philanthropy Communications & Marketing

2024

Core Faculty:
Michael J. Beall, Dean

Class Guest Speakers:
Annie Waters, Children’s MN

Summary

Today, philanthropy communications has taken on a role of more strategic importance. While donors continue to list communications as a top reason why they stay or go, resources tend to be thin. In addition to donors, communicating the role of philanthropy to internal audiences (doctors, nurses & employees) and aligning with Marketing to drive community trust—it’s just a lot. This course is about providing students with tools, strategies, rationale and inspiration for not just getting through, but for re-imagining what’s possible.
